Where Fashion Week fixtures unwind

We asked veteran manicurists, editors, models and designers how they detox after the shows, and secured exclusive TONY deals to help you relax like an expert for less. By Cristina Velocci

Jean Godfrey-June Executive beauty director at Lucky (luckymag.com)

TONY DEAL

"After Fashion Week, I go to Aire Ancient Baths (88 Franklin St between Broadway and Church St; 212-274-3777, ancientbathsny.com; use code "TONY" when booking online for 15 percent off any service through Sept 30). You lounge for two hours in tubs of varying hotness, in super-relaxing, super-flattering lighting. There is a salt bath where you float on top of the water, which is for some reason incredibly pleasant. You get a fantastic half-hour massage (weekday $120, weekend $127; includes thermal baths) that's so good, you feel like it's an hour, and you sip tea, steam in the steam room, and emerge feeling sexy and refreshed. Everyone is friendly, yet nonintrusive. Everything's clean, chic, subtly scented and very cool."

Jin Soon Choi Manicurist for Vera Wang, Tibi and Tess Giberson, and owner of Jin Soon Hand & Foot Spa (jinsoon.com)

"I usually go to Rhemedy by Rhed (230 W 13th St between Greenwich and Seventh Aves, suite 1B; 347-284-0086, rhemedybyrhed.com) for a full-body massage (30mins $70, 60mins $120, 75mins $145, 90mins $175), which combines alignment with deep-tissue [techniques] and yoga stretches. I visit Rob Gonzalez; he lets me enjoy the massage without talking to me."

Rebecca Minkoff Fashion designer (rebeccaminkoff.com)

"I get the River Rock facial (60mins $150) at Great Jones Spa (29 Great Jones St at Lafayette St; 212-505-3185, gjspa.com; mention TONY to receive 15 percent off any service through Sept 30, not to be combined with other offers or third-party gift certificates). After they do the cleansing and exfoliating, they use hot and cold stones to massage the face. I always feel rejuvenated with a healthy glow afterward. An insider tip is that with each service [more than $100], you get an all-day pass [worth $50] to the pools and saunas."

Anja Rubik Supermodel represented by Next Model Management (anjarubik.com)

"I love spending the day at Cowshed Spa at the Soho House (29–35 Ninth Ave between 13th and 14th Sts, third floor; 646-253-6111, cowshedonline.com). They do great massages (60mins $125–$210, 90mins $175–$260), and the eucalyptus steam room is such a treat. Decor and smell is very important to me at the spa—it's almost 50 percent of the treatment."
